TRIAL IN SEPTEMBER. It is probable that the men indicted will not be tried before September, as the calendar of the Criminal Court is full to overflowing. Judge Alford stated yesterday that he did not see how it would be possible to get the cases to trial before September.

The action of the grand jury was based on the evidence which developed during the hearing of Detective Stahl in Police Court. The hearing began May 28 and lasted for a week. The courtroom was crowded every day, the nature of the case, JURY'S INVESTIGATION. The grand jury examined witnesses and discussed the testimony for five days. The indictment returned contains three counts. The first is a general charge that the four named conspired to commit a felony-to bribe Edwin D. Logsdon. The second and third counts go into the detail of the alleged conspiracy, showing the methods adopted by the alleged conspirators. The allegations are made that Brown, Noel and Hunt feloniously attempted to get Stahl to bribe Logsdon in order that protection might be secured for their slot machines; that Stahl agreed to pay Logsdon $1,500 for his influence with the mayor, Board of Safety and police department.

STATEMENTS ARE MADE.

Views Expressed by All the Parties in Interest.

The following statements were made yesprobably showers in south portion; variaterday evening by those directly interested in the report of the grand jury:

Edwin D. Logsdon-I do not see how the grand jury could have done anything else. The simple fact of the matter is that if passenger train just before it reached Anthese men could have induced me to accept a bribe they would have sent me to the penitentiary branded as a thief. The public would no doubt have agreed with that view and everything would have gone | came seriously sick at Daleville, and Dr. to make that view seem just. Brown-I regard the indictments as a part of the defense against the attacks that have been made on ring government in this community. No man who has in the main tried to live a decent life will contentedly rest under a charge of wrong-doing, but he must not regard too seriously an indictment for bluff, brought by a grand jury that at the same time fails to indict professional gamblers, whose open and notorious conduc has shocked the moral sense of the people and shaken their faith in municipal gov-

We are trying to find out who is benetection. The other side, whoever is on that side, is trying to prevent citizens from finding out these things. The administration is fighting for its life and we have not, and do not, expect anything from it but desperate measures. The present situation, therefore, is not unexpected. The organs of the administration have been openly inciting the grand jury to these indictments, and one of them seems to have had inside information which enabled it to foretell the result. For my part I do not consider these as personal

Prosecutor Ruckelshaus-So far as I know the members of the grand jury were not influenced in any way. They were given the evidence, the law was explained and sions. I think the indictment is a good one. It has been carefully drawn under the statconstructions which may be taken of that statute. If the statute is to be considered as a whole and to be applied to Mr. Logsdon simply in his capacity as a member of the Board of Public Works, why, it is possible the indictment is not good, because he could not have "delivered the goods" in that capacity; but if the simple fact is control of the could not have "delivered the goods" in that capacity; but if the simple fact is control of the could not have "delivered the goods" in that capacity; but if the simple fact is control of the could not have "delivered the goods" in the capacity; but if the simple fact is control of the could not have "delivered the goods" in the capacity; but if the simple fact is control of the capacity is not good. sidered that the statute forbids any one to bribe or attempt to bribe an officer holding

RUMOR CREATED EXCITEMENT.

It Was Said Dr. Hunt Had Gone to

A rumor that Detective Stahl had left the city without the permission of the men who are on his bond, and that Dr. George E Hunt had been sent to St. Louis to locate him and bring him back, created a good deal of excitement last night. The rumor could not be verified nor could it be proved James W. Noel, when asked last night if Dr. Hunt had gone to St. Louis to bring Stahl back refused to answer the question in that form. "Stahl will be here Monday without the shadow of a doubt," he said. Further than that he would not go. Others talked to said they do not know where Dr. Hunt is, and that they suppose he is out of the city on matters of private business. Hilton U. Brown and others, including Attorney John S. Duncan, stated that Stahl would certainly be on hand to-morrow to meet the indictment returned against him.

DETECTIVE DETECTOR.

Unique and Lucrative Employment of Young Philadelphian.

Philadelphia Record. Two young men, one sumptuously and the other shabbily attired, met on Chestnut street the other day. They shook hands and then retired to a neighboring cafe. There, over a glass of vichy and a cigarette, they

"What," said the shabby one, "are you doing now, Mark?" conversed. "I have," returned the other, "the strangest job in the world, and the most lucra-

"The most lucrative?" "The most lucrative."
"What kind of a job is it, Mark?" "I am a detective detector." "What the deuce is that?" "I shadow detectives, learn their game and profit by my knowledge. Let me explain this thing to you by a concrete instance-an occurrence of last week. "Loafing in the morning, as my wont is in the close proximity to the main detective agency of this town, I saw a hansom draw up at the door, and forth stepped a woman of middle age, veiled heavily. She entered the agency, remained within twenty minutes and then drove away. I followed her to her residence and learned easily that she was Mrs. Dash, the wife of Dash, the "I learned with the same ease that Dash, for a month, had been staying out late at night, that gossip accused him of a sudden infatuation for a pretty shop girl, that he had been seen dining with this girl in quiet restaurants. Gossip in these accusations was probably wrong, but at any rate called on Dash that afternoon,

"'I am, sir,' I said, 'a detective detector, Your wife went to Blank's agency in a hansom at 10 o'clock this morning, and from this evening on a detective from Blank's will shadow you. A word to the wise, sir, is sufficient. "'How long,' asked Dash, who had turned pale, 'will I be shadowed?'

"'About a week, I think. The length time will rest with you partly.'

"He asked me to call and see him at the week's end. When the week was over he welcomed me with great warmth. "'My wife, with tears in her eyes,' said, 'told me this morning that she had been suspecting me unjustly. Hence I take it that the shadowing is over. I gave the shadower a time. I didn't get home till after midnight on any evening, and I kept the fellow busy following me to missions. to college settlements, to hospitals, to temperance lectures, to prayer meetings and to police stations, where I distributed tracts among the prisoners. Here, sir, is your check. You have done me a great service. And he handed me a check, Peter, that was bigger than your year's salary."
"I can readily believe it, Mark," said the shabby young man. "Well, that is my line of business, shad owing detectives, and it pays," said the youth with the white spats. "My stipend all comes from the people who are being shadowed. No matter how good these people are, guess they think that they can be better at a pinch, and therefore they are grateful for my information and they reward me. Even a minister once rewarded me, and, while under espionage, he stopped playing croquet in the afternoons, as his habit had been, and took to reading religious works in and spoke on "Vacations and Health." F. M. Heath, of St. Regis in the Adirondacks, spoke of the mountains as the oldest portion of the world and of more than usual interest to the Hundred Year Club.

L. S. Brown struck the popular chord when he responded to the toast, "Vacations in a Tent." He said: "Every man, if he be in part a tent dweller and a fisherman, has some nook in some quiet community which he believes the good Lord made solely for his benefit. For ten or eleven months of the year he will dream of its sparkle as it ripples over pebbly beds of yellow sand or gurgles in and out, swirling in silent foam-covered eddies under the pines and hemlocks. Then comes his vacation, and he wades in its cool shallows and casts for trout in the dark, hidden pools. It says in the Good Book that one must become as a little child to enter into

cation in New York city. EGGS IN COLD STORAGE.

When and How the Eggs Are Stored in These Houses. Good Housekeeping.

What you see in a cold-storage warehouse is a wide, whitewashed apartment threaded by a network of pipes, which sparkle with frost. The temperature is kept at 30 degrees Fahrenheit by a circulation of brine which goes on through the pipes exactly as hot water or steam warms our homes in the winter. The air of the storehouse is sweet and wholesome, for it is immaculately clean. With a lack of cleanliness would follow spoiled eggs. Around the room are tiers upon tiers of wooden boxes. Inside these are packed the eggs, layer upon layer, separated by a thickness of cork shavings, then a tray of strawboard and more shavings. The insides of these boxes are as cleansmelling as the storage room. If an egg should break it would immediately freeze, and frozen leakage has no odor. A glance at the business end of the coldstorage egg system is of interest. The busy season for the incoming of eggs begins with February. Then the Southern hens are be-ginning to lay, and from Kentucky, Louisiana and Texas come the first carloads. The spring creeps slowly up to Kansas, Virginia and the middle States, so in March come further consignments of eggs from these localities. In April all through the East and the far West sounds the cheerful cackle which means an egg, or rather, millions of eggs; then the eggs of eggs. lions of eggs; then the egg packer and the cold storage man work night and day. It is o unusual occurrence during the busy season for thirty or forty carloads of eggs to be sent out by an egg packer in one week. Each car contains four hundred cases of thirty dozen each, in all probably 140,000 597 secured.

eggs. These are unpacked as promptly as possible, and quite frequently before the end of the season a thousand carloads, something like 140,000,000 eggs in all, are in readiness for winter consumption.

MINERS AT WINSLOW.

Five Thousand Listen to Secretary Wilson and Others Speak.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. EVANSVILLE, Ind., June 20 .- It is estimated that 5,000 persons were at Winslow to-day to participate in the celebration of "Mitchell day." Hundreds of miners who have never seen their leader were keenly the kingdom of heaven. So it is if one disappointed when they learned he was not would appreciate nature he must become to be present. Secretary Wilson was there to represent the miners' president and to apologize for his absence. In an address Secretary Wilson reviewed the recent strike in Pennsylvania and pointed out in clear and forcible language how the miners were right in their demands and attitude. During the morning Judge Thomas H. Dillon, of Petersburg, made an address,
